

Is it Biblically Correct to Use Water as a Medium for the Blood of Jesus?

Sixbert SANGWA • August 11, 2024

In contemporary Christian practices, there are instances where individuals pray over water, believing it transforms into the blood of Jesus and confers healing and protection, especially against demonic attacks. Some pastors also engage in this practice, distributing "blessed" water to their followers or using it to bless and cast out demons. While the blood of Jesus indeed holds immense spiritual value and power, it is essential to examine these practices against biblical teachings to understand their correctness and relevance.

The New Testament emphasizes the importance of the blood of Jesus Christ in the salvation and redemption of humanity. Hebrews 9:22 states, "According to the law almost everything is purified with blood, and without the shedding of blood there is no forgiveness." The blood of Jesus is central to the Christian faith, symbolizing the ultimate sacrifice for sin and the means through which believers are reconciled with God. This underscores the spiritual importance of Jesus' blood, but it does not imply that this sacred symbol should be transferred to other mediums like water.

The practice of praying over water and believing it transforms into the blood of Jesus appears to have roots in traditional and symbolic rituals rather than explicit biblical mandates. While water itself is significant in Christianity, particularly in the sacrament of baptism (Matthew 3:16), the Bible does not endorse the idea of water transforming into the blood of Jesus through prayer. This practice can be traced back to pagan traditions where water and other elements were believed to possess magical properties when blessed or prayed over. In ancient pagan rituals, water was often used as a conduit for spiritual energy or to invoke the presence of deities, a concept that starkly contrasts with Christian beliefs.

Biblical Perspective

The Bible emphasizes faith in the unseen. Hebrews 11:1 defines faith as "the reality of what is hoped for, the proof of what is not seen." The Bible encourages believers to have faith in the abstract, not in physical objects or symbols. The act of praying over water to transform it into the blood of Jesus deviates from this principle, as it places faith in a tangible object rather than in the unseen power of God. This contradicts the essence of Christian faith, which is fundamentally rooted in the belief in the unseen and the spiritual.

Exodus 20:4-5 warns against creating and worshiping idols: "Do not make an idol for yourself, whether in the shape of anything in the heavens above or on the earth below or in the waters under the earth. Do not bow in worship to them, and do not serve them." While the intention behind using water may not be idolatrous, it risks attributing divine power to a physical object, which can lead to idolatrous practices. This is akin to the ancient Israelites creating the golden calf, believing it would serve as a physical representation of God's power.

Moreover, in John 4:14, Jesus refers to Himself as the living water: "But whoever drinks from the water that I will give him will never get thirsty again. In fact, the water I will give him will become a well of water springing up in him for eternal life." This metaphorical language emphasizes the spiritual sustenance that comes directly from Jesus, not through any intermediary objects like water. Jesus Himself is the source of eternal life and spiritual nourishment, not any blessed or prayed-over physical substance.

The Role of Pastors and "Blessed" Water

Regarding the role of pastors and blessed water, it's a trending practice where some pastors distribute blessed water to their followers or use it in rituals to cast out demons and confer blessings. This practice can be traced to various traditional and cultural beliefs that attribute spiritual power to blessed objects. Some pastors may genuinely believe they are helping their congregants, but the underlying theology is flawed and can be misleading.

Biblically speaking, the Bible confirms the authority in Jesus' Name but not through any other item. Mark 16:17 states, "And these signs will accompany those who believe: In my name they will drive out demons; they will speak in new tongues." The authority to cast out demons and perform miracles is given in the name of Jesus, not through any physical objects like water. The emphasis should be on the power of Jesus' name rather than on any blessed item. When pastors use water as a medium, they inadvertently shift focus away from Jesus and onto the object, which can lead to misplaced faith and potential spiritual harm.

Furthermore, Christians are warned against the danger of deception: 2 Corinthians 11:14-15 warns, "And no wonder! For Satan disguises himself as an angel of light. So it is no great surprise if his servants also disguise themselves as servants of righteousness. Their end will be according to their works." The use of physical objects like water for spiritual purposes can sometimes open the door to deceptive practices and false teachings. It is crucial to discern and ensure that such practices align with biblical truths. By relying on physical objects, believers may unwittingly fall into demonic bondage, mistaking it for divine intervention.

Similar Erroneous Beliefs and Practices

Relics and Talismans: Some Christians believe in the power of religious relics and talismans to bring protection and blessings. This practice, similar to the use of blessed water, risks attributing spiritual power to physical objects rather than to God. The Bible is clear that our faith should not be placed in any created object but solely in God. Acts 17:29 states, "Being God's offspring, then, we shouldn't think that the divine nature is like gold or silver or stone, an image fashioned by human art and imagination."

Prosperity Gospel: The prosperity gospel teaches that faith and positive confession can lead to material wealth and physical health. This belief often emphasizes tangible blessings and physical manifestations of faith, which can detract from the true gospel message of spiritual transformation and eternal life in Christ. 1 Timothy 6:9-10 warns, "But those who want to be rich fall into temptation, a trap, and many foolish and harmful desires, which plunge people into ruin and destruction. For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil, and by craving it, some have wandered away from the faith and pierced themselves with many griefs."

Conclusion

The Bible calls believers to place their faith in the unseen power of God and the finished work of Jesus Christ, rather than in any physical objects or symbols. While the blood of Jesus is indeed powerful and central to the Christian faith, practices such as praying over water to transform it into the blood of Jesus or using blessed water as a medium for spiritual power are not supported by biblical teachings. Christians are encouraged to rely on the name of Jesus and the authority given through Him, ensuring that their faith remains rooted in the abstract and unseen, as exemplified by the Scriptures.

By examining these practices through a biblical lens, believers can avoid erroneous beliefs and maintain a pure, undiluted faith in the power of Jesus Christ. The emphasis should always be on the spiritual and the unseen, as taught by the Bible, rather than on physical objects that can easily lead to idolatry and deception. In a world where trends and practices constantly evolve, it is crucial for Christians to stay grounded in the truth of God's Word, ensuring that their faith remains untainted and focused solely on Jesus Christ. Additionally, it is important to beware of some Christian ministers using this ritual to cause spiritual bondage with their evil spirits. Christians must discern and avoid such practices, maintaining their trust in the unseen and spiritual power of God.

Related Articles

- How Have Christians Come to Believe Differently?
- Is Every Religion Valid, or Which Is the True Religion?
- Are There Prominent Evangelists Tied to the Illuminati?
- Are Some Theological Institutions Serving the Devil's Purpose?
- What is the Difference between Being Religious and Being a Christian?
- Is the One-World Religion an Apostate Feature of the End Times Scenario?
- Are Certain Churches and Ministries Tied to the Illuminati and Freemasons?

Further Resources

- Explore Online Ministry Opportunities at Open Christian Ministries \(USA\)
- Explore Christian Business Services at the Center for Faith and Work \(Rwanda\)
- Pursue an Affordable Online Christian Degree at Open Christian University \(USA\)
- Kindly Share Your Question for Consideration in Future Articles. Click Here to Submit
- Ask a Question or Utilize Our Trained AI Bot to Craft Your Evangelical Article - Begin Here

← Back to blog

Comments (0)

Post Comment

